Sanitary Plant Site Shifted Across River

The proposed Carmel Sanitary District sewage disposal plant will be located across the river upon land at present used for artichoke raising, instead of on this side as originally recommended by Engineer Clyde C. Kennedy, of San Francisco, if a new move by the Board of Trustees is carried out. As no site has as yet been purchased, any change in location would be a matter of rearranging details on paper.

Engineer Kennedy, who has been working with the Board for a number of months, has the Reno and Dunsmuir sanitary installations to point to, where he has sent disposal mains across rivers by the combined trestle and suspension method, the suspension distance in one instance being 130 feet. There is of course more danger of washout in crossing the Carmel river than in the location on the near side, but certain other factors enter into the case and make for its apparent advisability.

The increased cost of crossing the river will be compensated for by simpler construction of buildings which will house the disposal plant.

The total expense would be within the present figures of $83,700 upon which district voters will be asked to vote bonds at the March 12th election, with some $15,600 coming from the government if PWA funds are allotted, as there is good indication of being done at the present time. The request for funds, accompanied with tentative layout of the project, has gone to Washington with the approval of local and regional government authorities.

Council Favors License Fees On Sliding Scale

The Carmel council Wednesday night, with all present except John Jordan, expressed approval in principal of the Business Asociation's suggested business license based on a sliding scale of fees, the scale to be determined by brackets of gross receipts that would mean fees ranging from $8 to $100 annually.

Discussion centered on whether a business license was intended as revenue to the city treasury or as a controlling influence on business firms, and also on whether business firms could be made to reveal their gross income so that they might be taxed in their proper bracket. Council members and officials of the Business Association discussed the problem without animosity and showed earnest desire to replace the vexing Ordinance 54, now determining these license sums, with a more equitable ordinance that would among other things favor handicrafts and amateur entertainments.

Willard Whitney presented the association's case, having worked for a long period to prepare a tentative ordinance based on those existing in other cities and yet framed with the peculiar needs of Carmel in mind.

He said that in the business men's meeting the night before, where an only fair representation had assembled, that after several hours of consideration of all phases it had been the unanimous opinion to favor the sliding scale instead of a flat rate, and to make any new business entering town pay $100 before it could operate, this to be adjusted on a refund basis if it remained operative for one year and at that time did not have a gross income in the top license bracket.

"If this is protective tariff," said Mayor John Catlin, "let me sound warning that Judge Jorgensen has lately expressed an opinion that such protective tariffs may be unconstitutional."

Eugene Watson, presiding officer of the association, countered with the belief that the preliminary fee was necessary to protect local business from fly-by-night competition that takes the cream of summer trade and then departs, leaving permanent merchants at a disadvantage. It was not a restraint of trade but would be a curb to solicitors, peddlers and the like, and to objectionable traveling amusements such as carnivals and circuses, but no deterrent to sincere new merchants nor professional people.

Jesse A. Bunch cited an example of how a man might start a restaurant on $20., and this brought statistics that during the past eight years there has been no less than eighty-two eating places established in town, many of which had survived a relatively short time but all of which had worked hardship on the more substantial food places.

Miss Clara Kelogg, of the Council, feared that a high original fee might deter small artistic enterprise, but admitted the need for some form of restriction, and Councilman Robert Norton thought that the general idea of the sliding scale fee was good but that the maximum sum might be excessive, while the minimum was too low. Councilman Herbert Heron was in favor of a strict licensing ordinance as direct help to established firms, and cited instances of injury through lax laws.

Each bracket will have sufficient spread so that the merchant who states that his gross receipts are within that range will not divulge his exact income to a competitor and yet will pay a fair fee to the city collector. Collection of fees would be annual and the fiscal year would begin July 1st.

Upon March 7th at the regular meeting the council will set a date for hearing of further arguments on the licensing problem, and all merchants are urged to be present or be repesented at that time.

A committee investigating impovement of Scenic road and protection of the cliffs from action of the sea reported that an accurate map of property lines, drainage areas, trees and other features of the waterfront should be made before definite study of the problem could be made. Members of this committee include John Jordan, Frank Cole, William Silva and Kent Clark, and the council asked that property owners and other interested parties appear at the March 7th meetng to express their views in the matter.

Scenic Road is one of the town's most valuable assets, and the council and public alike are deeply interested in increasing its usefulness to motorists and pedestrians in view of summer traffic and future visitors when the coast highway is completed.

MOST POWERFUL CARMEL ARTIST WORKS IN OPEN

The artist who wields the most powerful brush in Carmel must remain nameless in these columns in order that other brush users will not start one of those homey arguments that gets Carmel in the city headlines all to often.

And he works in broad daylight on the streets, and swings paint in a manner that would bring shudders to the esthetes and to the south Irelanders. Now that you have guessed it, he is the arm of the law, is painting loading and no-parking zone stripes on the curbs of the main streets . . . painting them boldly and in orange paint strongly mixed with banana oil. Hence the Irish uprising on the eve of St. Patrick's Day may be expected, especially if tagged by traffic officers for illegal parking.

Carmel's New Postmaster, Irene Cator

Irene Cator Takes On Postmasters Job

Mrs. Irene Cator, Carmel's new acting postmaster, took over the office from W. L. Overstreet, who has held it for nearly five years, upon Wednesday, although her official duties did not begin until Thursday, the 1st of March. She announced that there would be no changes in personnel and that her earnest desire was to give patrons of the office full measure of efficiency, and at the same time she paid high tribute to the organization and management of the department as it exists today.

A native of San Jose, Mrs. Cator has received training in an unusual combination of music and mathematics, as well as having had long experience in handling of groups from both the artistic and the business angles, and brings to her new position an ability and training that will stand her in good stead.

At the risk of repeating what Carmel already well knows, Mrs. Cator and her husband, Thomas Vincent Cator, the composer, came here fifteen years ago with their several small children, and were soon prominently identified with the musical and dramatic life of the community. It was here that Mr. Cator perfected the Aura Modal scale that was to be perhaps his greatest contribution to the realm of music, and Mrs. Cator was his right hand assistant in the work.

Her first appearance in musical effort was at the age of three as a dancer and this was followed by an education in piano and violin technique during which period she made frequent stage presentations, many of them in charitable causes. The College of Notre Dame, then located in San Jose, was her alma mater, and in it she received awards for general scholarship, as well as in literary and scientific courses, and upon graduation was given a gold medal for high rating in mathematics and music.

This new official's experience in organizing and directing stage activities began while still a young student when her mother, Mrs. James H. Campbell, wife of the Santa Clara County District Attorney, enlisted the daughter's enthusiastic interest in connection with concerts, plays, light operas and similar productions for social and club work and benefit productions throughout the county.

Becoming a full-fledged director at the age of sixteen through illness of Charles Hildesly, in charge of Gilbert and Sullivan's "Iolanthe," which was being given for funds to purchase a club house for the San Jose Woman's Club, she found herself at the helm and carried through rehearsals of principals and chorus in a manner that brought high praise through results obtained. It is of interest that two present-day Carmelites were in leading roles, Mrs. Jo Mora, in the role of Fairy Queen, and Argyll Campbell, as Lord Chancellor. Campbell is Mrs. Cator's brother, and has been long a prominent member of the Monterey County bar as office holder and civil lawyer.

Mrs. Cator's biggest work in organization was in conection with "The Soul of Sequoia," the book and lyrics being by Don Richards and the music by Thomas Vincent Cator, when she and the Richards took care of the production details including cast, orchestra, lighting systems, tent city for the hundred and twenty-five appearing on stage, as well as the many technical workers, and caring for innumerable other duties connected with such an ambitious offering. Mr. Cator became ill in the midst of preparations, and Mrs. Cator filled in much of his part personally with the orchestra. The site of the famous play was in Big Basin Redwood Park.

It was after this "Soul of Sequoia," which, by the way, was such a success in its amply attended performances that the state legislature passed a bill making it a yearly event, that the Cators came to Carmel.

While the office of pastmaster is the first public appointment that she will have held, save for teaching music in public schools, her training and outlook give belief that she will amply qualify for the strenuous work in a growing community, and she will come into office with the best wishes of Carmel supporting her.

Carmel Up In The Air Over Annual Kite Day

The annual kite flying jamboree took place last Saturday on Hatton Fields mesa with over fifty entries, a hundred and fifty excited child spectators and five hundred grown-up onlookers every bit as eager as the youngsters. Three divisions were established under pennants on the roped-off field and kites from the size of a sheet of paper to those taller than the judges were first inspected, the prizes were awarded and then up they went.

Under supervision of Rev. Willis White, who has conducted these flights for over forty years in various parts of the country, but who was represented on the field by the Rev. Melvin Dorsett, the parade gathered at the Sunset School, went through the main streets of town, then down San Carlos and paused at the Mission in respect to Father Serra, and went up to the scene of action where a crowd had gathered. A good wind, clear weather and ample provision for keeping the crowd in check and yet allow display of the entries made the setting perfect.

First to be judged was the Best Made section, under its fluttering red pennant, and this was won by Forrest Nicol, 7th grade of Sunset School, with a bright orange entry, and second was Charlott Townsend, 3rd grade Forest Hills School, with an elaborate box kite of red and blue, a tiny figure of a man suspended in it to indicate that it was a model of military man-carrying affair. Judges were O. W. Bardarson, Miss Huntington and the Rev. Petrie, of Pacific Grove.

Following this was the Oddest group, judged by Frederick Howard, Hazel Watrous and John Dennis, in which Galen Alderson, sophomore in the Monterey High School, won with a ferocious dragon of hugh proportions, and Joyce Whitcomb, 7th grade Sunset, got second with a kite covered with Sunday funny papers. In the Prettiest section, judged by Bernard Rowntree, Clara Kellogg and His Honor Mayor John Catlin, Alan Wood, 6th Grade Sunset, got first with a shimmering cellophane flier spangled with stars, and Edgar Leslie, of the 7th grade at Sunset, got second with a black and gold Mickey Mouse kite.

When you remember that first prize was $5.00 in cash and the second was $2.50 you have the reason for all the excitement, the labor early and late, the loving care in use of glue and flower-and-water paste, the sewng, the nailing, the splicing that has been on since announcement of the contest weeks ago.

The sky was patched with three dozen kites as they sailed for the Distance and Height event, this being won by Ted Marble, Sunset 7th grade, with a featherweight tailless flown on a fine silk cord, and Alan Wood was second with his prize winner of the Beauty contest. Children dashed about to make unwilling fliers go up, others stood still and their models of perfection rose without a tremor, still others made repairs and adjustments like early aviators used to do while the crowd urged them on. Here a kite broke away and was chased by a red-faced owner, and there another tangled lines with somebody else's pride and joy and there was heaving and hauling and loud talking until they were untangled or until they came flopping down locked in fatal embrace.

Tail spins, swoops, broken frames and much splashing through the puddles went on until it was announced that across the road the Filipino fighting kites would engage one another, and the climax of the day proved a thriller even for veterans. F. Isorda and G. Gabarra sent up their battlers and to the craning of many necks the contestants dove, climbed, clashed and fluttered under expert handling of the owners until Gabarra's hawk beat down the enemy.

Next was the Idel Machiles and Leoni Arizala fray, with the latter's "U. S. Navy" triumphing after moments of combat, and the final bout was between this flier and the Gabarra hawk. Time after time they both came down with a whack but were able to be untangled and go aloft again, until finally the little hawk disabled the Navy and rose triumphant. Judges were Ernest Calley, Ranald Cockburn and Winsor Josselyn, and no judges ever enjoyed their duty more thoroughly, nor admired the contestants more for their airmanship and stamina in the face of combat. Many an old soldier was reminded of airplane dogfights in the war, and great admiration was heard on all sides for Gabarra's handling of his little game-bird.

It is hoped that another year will find sections divided by age limits so that the little fellows who have struggled to make their own entries will not be in competition with old contestants. For instance, Gail Fratis, aged 6, had made his kite almost entirely by himself, as had Suzanne Watson, slightly older, and Baird Bardarson. Not to forget, among the many more, Clara Walls, John Black, Ronald Dorsett, Adrian Harbolt and Bill Rissel. Gordie Miomoto had a clockface kite with the hands at two, while Ernest Calley had a huge bat kite, not in the contest, decorated by Kate Matheson.

In some ways the most colorful work was done by Pedro Ilicito and his steady high flier to which he sent intricate messages up the cord, one a pair of stars, another a pair of butterfly wings. When the messages arrived at the kite they promptly folded up and slid back to the operator.

Much praise is due all who gave a hand to make the day the success it was, and Rev. White wishes thanks to be extended to his many assistants, for their spirit in helping make the event memorable for dozens of Carmel children.

"STREETS OF NEW YORK" HAS GOOD TURNOUT

The "Streets of New York," that enjoyable play; which was produced in 1932 by the Community Players; was again a success when produced by the Dramatic Club of the High School. Phillip Walker as Jaspar was perhaps the main "hit" of the play. With a good crowd attending, and the players "fit" the play was quite enjoyable. The witty remarks of Jaspar were greeted with much applause. This also goes to prove that juveniles, if given a chance, can make "good."

"They Knew What They Wanted" Comes Again

Seven years ago, when Edward Kuster at the Golden Bough first introduced Carmel to the delights of "They Knew What they Wanted," the Pine Cone said, "It has been a wonderful season, filled with good things for the theatre-goer, but there has been nothing finer than 'They Knew What They Wanted'." This year, in a season not precisely "wonderful," theatrically speaking, anywhere in the country, Sidney Howard's famous Pulitzers Prize comedy of California ranch life should be particularly welcome. Kuster will bring to life again that jovial old rogue "Tony Patucci," than which no more entertaining character has appeared in American drama. With Althea Kendall as "Amy," Evert Sholund as "Joe," Frank Hefling as "Father McKee," Dr. W. B. Williams as "Dor," Philip Reamer as the "R. F. D." and Guy Koepp as "Ah Gee," it would be difficult to conceive of a better Peninsula cast for these principal roles. The wedding "festa" in the second act will comprise twenty others, Georgie Wapple and Teresa Durante playing the two Italian mothers who pull hair over the merits of their respective bambini; Shim Kuster will be "Giovannino" and little Ellen Pearl McGrury, the highly-starched "Maria Maddalena Vittoria Rosina Emanuela"!

W. K. Bassett, then editing the local "Cymbal" since departed, wrote, "You have done something that thrills me—and please God I shall never forget it. If a better thing has been done in this town—amateur or professional—I have never seen it . . . . Of course you had a remarkably fine play for your vehicle; one that was many times over worthy of the Pulitzer Prize, but then you interpreted it on the stage in a manner that actually did credit to the play and was one of the finest of compliments to the playwright."

"They Knew What They Wanted" will be played at Carmel Community Playhouse three nights beginning next Thursday, with a new scale of popular prices prevailing. A badly mangled movie version has introduced this delightful play to millions, but what has not seen it in its original form has still much to look forward to.

Kuster's efforts in Carmel have been steadily directed, not without plenty of obstacles in the path, toward converting "theatricals" into "theatre." Whether he has attained this purpose is best answered by pointing out such productions as "The Trip'ny Opera," "Beggar on Horseback," "Dulcy," "Amaco," "Karl and Anna" and, most entertaining of the lot, "They Knew What They Wanted." Starting from scratch, as it were, with a new cast, a different theatre and a substantially new public, next week's revival will be particularly interesting to oldtimers.

Of the story of "They Knew What They Wanted," in which the lovable and excitable old Tony Patucci, who grows grapes near Napa, goes down to San Francisco, sees a pretty little waitress and straightway goes home and makes his foreman write her a letter in his Tony's name, the author has this to say, "It is shamelessly, consciously and proudly derived from the legend of Tristan and Isolde . . . . and I advise all writers who need plots and can't make up good ones of their own, to pick a particularly good one out of the classics!" What happens after the first letter, and how Amy comes up to the ranch to be married, and what occurs thereafter to bring the play to a happy and triumphant close, with the audience half-laughing and half-crying, will be disclosed at the Community Playhouse next weekend. Ticket sale begins Monday.

NOEL SULLIVAN GIVES WELCOME SONG RECITAL
by Hal Garrott

Noel Sullivan's annual song recital in the Denny-Watrous Gallery is doubly welcome to Carmelites. Our village has pianists, violinists, cellists, dancers, directors, actors, painters. But strange to say, as far as I know, no one has ever lived here who could sing. There must be some subtle difference between the sunny voice-producing skies of Italy and our own. In Carmel only the birds sing well.

In Negro Spirituals Noel Sullivan's sonorous bass would be welcome anywhere. These he sings with almost Ethiopian fervor in a thundering voice that quickens the pulse. Well sung numbers on Mr. Sullivan's program comprised Schumann's "Ich Grolle Nicht," a selection from Mendelssohn's Elijah, one from Gounod's Faust, Sea Charm by Harris, Foster's "Carry Me Along," "Silence" by Pierce, and, of course, the two spirituals.

In the trickier classics and slow moving songs where the tones are not strongly sustained, this soloist is occasionally guilty of incorrect intonation, flatting and vocal dryness. Such minus qualities could be avoided by limiting the program to the type of song Mr. Sullivan does best. Elizabeth Alexander's well played accompaniments were a feature of this enjoyable recital.

MANY CARMELITES SEE STATE BADMINTON GAMES

More than thirty Carmel members of the Old Monterey Polo Club went down to Pasadena over the week-end to take part in the second annual California State Badminton Championships. Charles Frost, a star Abalone League player, worked his way up to the semi-finals in the men's singles, and made his opponent go the limit in the match that eliminated him.

Many social events were arranged by the Southern California hosts, and throughout the year contests are planned in the various badminton centers of the state.

SPORT OF KINGS TO BE REVIVED AT DEL MONTE

Sponsored by leading horsemen on the Pacific coast, the first steeplechase and race meet of the season will be staged on the Del Monte race track Sunday March 18 it was announced today.

In addition to the steeplechase which will feature some of the finest horses in the country, a new event, a polo pony race, will be held at the same time. Riding the polo ponies will be noted polo stars who will be participating in the finals of the Pacific Coast high goal polo championship.

There will be seven races on the program, two of which will be steeplechases. One will be the Pebble Beach steeplechase, run on a mile and a half track and the third annual Del Monte Gold Cup steeplechase run on two miles.

Also on the program will be a ladies race in which society riders from the northern and southern part of the state will participate. Another new event will be a military race with United States cavalry officers as jockeys.

The event is being held under the auspices of the Pacific Coast Steeplechase association. Sponsors of the event include Henry Potter Russell; Sidney Fish, Stuart Haldorn, S. F. B. Morse, Mrs. Tobin Clark, Reginald Sinclaire, Sam Fertig, Tom Mathews, Reginald Johnson and Ann Heese.

Ivy Van Cott and Holly Smith spent Monday in San Francisco. On the return journey they stopped off in San Jose to see Eva La Gallienne in Hedda Gabler. At the theatre they ran into several members of the Pinkham family who recently left here to live in Los Gatos.

TED WATSON HAS ROLE IN PRIZE WINNING PLAY

Ted Watson, son of Major and Mrs. H. L. Watson, has lately taken part in a prize-winning play "The Snare and the Fowler," a one-act presentation that topped scholastic competition in Southern California recently put on at the Pasadena Community Theatre Workshop. Written by Beulah Marie Dix, it was supervised at the San Diego Army and Navy Academy, where young Watson is a student, by the resident instructor.

The critics commented especially upon Watson's stage presence and diction, and while Carmel cannot claim a major share in the honor of his training, it at least can claim some through his connection with the local stage work.

"STABAT MATER" PRACTICES EVERY SUNDAY NIGHT

By March 29, when the Carmel Music Society present the Monterey Peninsula Orchestra, Michel Penha conductor, in a super-performance of Rossini's "Stabat Mater," every school child and every adult should be able to hum the then familiar airs.

With the orchestra augmented to forty, patiently drilled by the indefatigable Mr. Penha, a chorus of seventy-five, prepared by Fenton Foster, and the four soloists, professionals from San Francisco, the production will be the biggest and most spectacular to date in the history of our Orchestra.

BURGLARS AT PET SHOP FRIGHTENED BY PARROT

During the week end ambitious gentlemen unknown went to the trouble of breaking through a glass in a rear door and entering the Pet Shop during the late hours of night. Their efforts were rewarded with 11 cents taken from the till. It is thought that screeching parrots frightened the intruders away, as the stock was found intact.

TALK ON MEXICO FOR WOMEN'S CLUB

"Personal Experience in Mexico" is the subject of a talk by Mrs. W. F. Grant to be given at the meeting of the Carmel Women's Club, next Monday afternoon at half past two in the Girl Scout House. This meeting is under the auspices of the Book Section of the club.

COME TO CARMEL TO BE WEDDED

Ethel Hughes of berkeley and Paul Cowgill of Missouri were united in marriage at a ceremony performed by Rev. Melvin C. Dorsett in the Manse, Feb. 22. They were accompanied by the bride's mother, Mrs. F. A. Buckman of San Jose. Mr. Cowgill is an employee of the State Highway Commission. The newlyweds will live at 68 South Thirteenth St., San Jose.

WARNER PICTURE BEING SHOT AT POINT LOBOS

A Warner Brothers motion picture company, with James Cagney and Joan Blondel under direction of Lloyd Bacon, in a story tentatively entitled "Without Honor," has been working during the week at Point Lobos where a fishing village set has been built at the cannery inlet.

A fiesta scene is planned against the Carmel Mission as a background and scores of peninsula people will take part if the weather holds fair. A somewhat different treatment of a Cagney-Blondel story is being used, insofar as gangster Cagney arranges for blonde Blondel to marry a man who loves her, while he himself is taken for a ride by members of a gang he has double-crossed.

A number of Carmel people are being used, including John Middlesworth of local little theatre fame.

PROFESSIONAL MEN DINE AT DEL MONTE

The first anunal dinner of Monterey County Professional Men was held Wednesday night at Hotel Del Monte, and attracted many Carmel representatives. It included the Medical Society, the District Dental Society and the Bar Association, with the object of discussing and taking action upon problems common to professional people and the community in general.

TRAVELER TELLS HOW WE IMPRESS NEWCOMER

Any traveler who takes time to tell a Carmelite how beautiful he thinks this region is, will always have an attentive ear in our village. So when Mr. R. Bruening, of Elmhurst, Illinois, who is making a trip around the world accompanied by his wife, told us this of late we asked to mention it to the public at large.

"Your natural beauty of forests, and hills and blue ocean is magnetic from the first moment you see the place," he said. "And with it is a wholesome simplicity of life that takes the newcomer in and makes him at home, yet it is combined with an up-to-date modernity that prevents a back-woodsey feeling.

"We first heard of Carmel in 1915, and Mrs. Bruening came here soon afterward on a trip. Ever since then she has been telling me how wonderful it was, but until now I have not been able to come out and discover for myself just how truly she spoke. Yes, and after the world trip we are coming out here to make it our home if our present plans hold."

He told of hospitality that had been extended by such well-known Carmelites as Roberta Thudicum and William Watts, the artists, and by Mr. and Mrs. James Thoburn. When asked of what part of the globe it reminded him, he replied that Amalfi, Sorrento and Nice were all represented hereabouts, which gives us one more far-traveled visitor to compare our region with the classic sections of the old world.

NOTED IRISHMAN IS VISITOR IN CARMEL

By WINSOR JOSSELYN

That distinguished young Irishman, the Right Honorable Andrew Jameson, of Sutton House, Baily, County Dublin, has lately been in our midst.

A stocky, quiet-spoken gentleman of sandy hair, carefully parted a fraction to the right of the middle, hazel eyes which, beneath inquiring brows, see without prying, close cropped gray moustache, vigorous complexion that implies first-hand knowledge of the British Isles . . . a gentleman whose accomplishments have earned him the right to sign after his name such titles as Member of the Privy Council, Member of the Irish Free State Senate, a director of the Bank of Ireland, Chairman of the Irish Light Commission and Chairman of Jameson and Son, of Dublin, a firm that has been making smacking-good whiskey since 1780.

He must be young to carry on all these duties, and yet in the 1870's he hunted buffalo in Texas with Elliott Roosevelt, brother of Theodore, and since then has been on the Atlantic seaboard innumerable times, although infrequently to the west coast, hence is no stranger to the United States.

"Yes," he commented, "and on that buffalo hunt we were warned to get back to cover because some Comanches, who had been let out to do a little hunting on their own account, had filled up on buffalo meat and were looking for bigger game than bison."

When the knotty problem of present day finance, abroad and at home, was touched on it brought lines in his forehead and mild reproof in his voice, for if international experts found it, as somebody had suggested, to be a salad of broken razor blades and rusty fishhooks, what must the layman find it to be? And a tentative poking at Irish politics brought a chuckle and the expressed fear that whatever he might say would go winging back across the water before he could get there for the opening of Parliament early in February, and he had rather not get started on the subject.

"You see, furthermore," he added, "I am over here for business and rest."

Business and rest? Well, we thought, in such an admirable combination must be the secret of the hale and hearty youthfulness that we found in this man of the polka-dot bow tie, the trim blue suit enlivened with a sunlit handkerchief in the breast pocket, a man whose words had but the mildest of brogue, with here and there a "g" quietly dropped.

When the now legal subject of whiskey was brought up, he relaxed on the divan and became as fine an exponent of temperance as we had ever heard.

"It was the saloon that brought about your prohibition," he said. "We were a bit surprised, however, at the speed with which it came. But for the past several years we knew it could not last. Now the thing that I'm puzzled about, is the young folks, say those of the twenties, with their lack of immediate precedent in use of fine liquors and wines.

And then ensued a discourse on what-was-what in a gentleman's use of certain beverages—a small whiskey-soda after a round of golf, perhaps a touch of sherry with the meal to aid digestion, and a liqueur afterward, or a bit of brandy in the coffee . . . .

Following which came eye-brightening description of the highlights of whiskey manufacture, of its leaving the pot stills and aging seven years in vast "stores" that had just the right temperature and circulaton of air around the casks of old wood so that the evaporation might be accurately controlled and the final results assured. And as he told with easy familiarity of how his Dublin product went through its stages from grain in the field to customer in the store, we thought awesomely of the vitriolic mixtures that we had seen slopped together and gulped while fumes yet arose from them, and wondered just what providence had watched over us.

Turning from this pleasant subject with its noble inclusion of thousands of gallons of mellow tonic, and its respectful mention of rare liqueur whiskey which could scarcely be told from fine brandy, the proverbial topic of Carmel-town came up.

"Why, I knew of Carmel through my friend Mr. Irving Taylor, who has spent many seasons here. You know, of Messrs. Taylor, who handle our goods in the United States. You ask me of what part of the world does this beautiful region remind me? Mmm—well, I should say portions of seacoast Portugal."

Then he glimpsed the inrolling leaden fog that followed a sparkling week, and added with a smile, "And just at this moment it reminds me of that delightful city of San Francisco."

FIRE TRAIL BEING CUT BY MEN OF CWS CAMP

Forestry Ranger Frank A. Moore, of Carmel, reports that his Civil Works Service camp of one hundred and fifty men at Pacific Grove is rapidly completing the fire break in the Del Monte forest between the Country Club and the Grove, with seven of the eight miles already finished. Work is now under way thinning out trees in adjoining sections.

This camp is one of the largest of its kind in the State, and will probably remain open until May 1st, with the number of workers constantly increasing. Ages range from the early twenties to the sixties, and Moore says that the high spirit of the workers accounts for the excellent results achieved.

Moore is also a licensed commercial airplane pilot, and has frequently flown in the forest patrol service during fire season, and is now making his home permanently in Carmel.

In the Seventh Grade Art class a very interesting project is taking place. This is the making of cornstarch paper as covers for the Social Studies work, under the direction of Miss Baer, art teacher.

Jack Pelton, the newly elected Business Manager, spoke on the coming baseball season. Huston Hannon spoke on "School Sportmanship." Buddy Hoffman, the recently elected Traffic Captain, spoke on "How Your Attitude Should be Toward Traffic Officers." Roger Fulton and Billy Wheeler spoke on "Protection of School Plants." The CWA was explained to the students by Lee Van Atta. Notice of the kite festival was given by Homer Levinson. Camille Burnham and Bud Brownell spoke on Abraham Lincoln and George Washington respectively. As a final end to the program the Monterey Peninsula High School Dramatic Club gave the highlights of their play to be presented this week at the High School. The name of the play being "The Streets of New York."

Wednesday morning at 11:20 the Eighth Grade presented their play, entitled "Fame Seekers." The leading roles were taken by Katherine Beaton, Joyce Uzzell, Dick Tevis, Raymond Brown, and Jonathan Hately. The object of the play was to impress upon the students the names of men who have done something in the world of art, science, literature and inventions.

Rehearsals are starting for the Seventh Grade Activity play. Miss Baer is to direct the play which is based on what was learned about early England.

TRAFFIC TANGLE TO BRING JURY TRIAL

A collision between a car driven by William Machado, of Carmel, and that of Mrs. C. E. Cowen, of Seaside, who is employed in Carmel, took place on 12th Street near Dolores on Monday morning and resulted in a complaint of reckless driving being sworn to by Mrs. Cowen against Machado. City Judge George Wood had them in his court immediately after the accident and when Machado plead not guilty and asked for a jury trial, the date was set at 10 o'clock March 5th.

ZONING ORDINANCE READY

A zoning ordinance for the Carmel-San Simeon highway as far south as Rat Creek will be recommended to the board of supervisors at their next meeting, by the county planning commission. It is much modified from the first suggested draft, due to the persistent objection to any zoning made by the property owners along the way, yet it will serve to curb the planting of auto camps and filling stations every few miles. It is probably as satisfactory an ordinance as the advocates of beauty above commercialism can expect, and should be promptly passed by the superivsors.

Carmel, directly interested in retaining the natural beauties of the highway, should be active in urging upon the supervisors the passage of the ordinance. The opponents will fight it to the end, and are organized and represented by an attorney. They possess considerable political influence, which will be used to its limit. To offset that, Carmel must act as a unit to assure the supervisors of its support of the measure, and its endorsement of those who vote for its passage. Letters to Supervisor Andrew B. Jacobsen, Del Monte Boulevard, Pacific Grove, will help a lot in saving the highway from commercialism.

VOTE FOR SANITARY BONDS

With but ten days before the election, the Sanitary District's proposed bond issue for a sewage disposal plant is unopposed in Carmel, and seems certain of carrying by the necessary two-thirds vote. However, every voter in the district should cast his ballot on Monday, March 12, at the Triangle Realty office on Dolores street, between Seventh and Eighth avenues, and make a certainty of the project which will permanently settle the problem of sewage disposal, remove the menace of disease and of a quarantine by the state board of health, and furnish work for several months to our local unemployed.

It can be stated authoritatively that there will be no polultion of the river's water, and no odorization of the neighboring air if the plans of the engineer—a member of the staff of the state board of health—are carried through. Years of study by the local sanitary board, composed of such citizens as Dr. J. B. McCarthy, Henry F. Dickinson, Hugh Comstock, Arthur T. Shand, Marsden Howard, and Willard Whitney, have given assurance of a clean and efficient disposal service. These are men of intelligence and probity, who would not make the mistake of allowing a nuisance or menace to what some day may be Carmel's public park, and they have had the advice of competent engineers in all technical matters.

Vote for the sanitary bonds. And at the same time, vote to continue in office Dr. McCarthy, Hugh Comstock and Marsden Howard as sanitary trustees to carry through the project they have organized.

For sanitary assessor, Bernard Rowntree is a candidate deserving support. He has been an active volunteer worker in charitable and civic affairs, and has been a great help in unemployment relief.

WINDS

I love the winds blowing,
Blowing against my face,
Salt sea winds or mountain winds
Or winds from any place.

They bring me whiffs of cedar
From far off Lebanon;
Twinkly ginger from Cathay
And spices from Luzon;

The Leis of Hawaii,
Parched coffee from Brazil,
The purple sage of deserts,
Virginia—dreaming still.

I love the winds blowing,
Blowing against my face,
Blue sky winds or cool rain winds
Or winds from any place.

They quench the fever running
Like fire through my veins
For the hands of God fall cooling
In blowing winds and rains.

—Annice Calland

DUNES

I who have never looked
On dunes
Crouching, bare-shouldered,
By the ocean,
Can hear them
Summer afternoons
Shift with uneasy motion.

SPRING

Flames of the wind and fleets of the sky
Over the heights and hollows fly.
Winter is gone! O heart on fire!
Leap into song as a sounding lyre!

Flutes of the sun and flights of breeze
Play through the leafing limbs of trees.
Earth is awake! O get thee wings!
Heaven will break when the first lark sings!

—Dora Hagemeyer

VALE, OVERSTREET

With four years and eight months service as Carmel's postmaster, William L. Overstreet became a private citizen yesterday. His record in the office was a good one. Always vigilant to improve the service, he sought and found opportunities to advantage the village and give the patrons of our postoffice ease and comfort. Bill Overstreet, courteous and helpful, gave full time to his public.

In retirement from Uncle Sam's employ, he is entitled to the congratulations of the village upon the record achieved, and he will have the hopes of the village for his continued success in private life.

WELCOME, COTTAGER

According to announcement, the Cottager, a weekly newspaper, will shortly make its appearance in Carmel, with Stephen A. Reynolds (S.A.R.) its editor. The Cottager, according to anouncement, will plug earnestly for a town loyal to its institutions and the home merchants. It will also (not in the announcement) take a hand in the various politics of the spring elections.

It was Stephen A. Reynolds who, eight years ago, started the Carmelite to elect a group of councilmen; having done which, he passed out of the picture, while the Carmelite struggled onward and upward under varied managements.

The Pine Cone welcomes the Cottager into the busy field of Carmel journalism.

PEOPLE TALKED ABOUT

J. Frank Stephens, head of Samuel French, New York play publishers, was lately in Carmel visiting old friends of the eastern stage, among them Frank Sheridan, Frederick Burt and George Marion. His present headquarters are in Los Angeles, where conditions are brisk with motion pictures.

"There are plays doing good business in New York," he said in commenting on the situation of the drama. "Many of them are first rate hits, which is encouraging after the outlook during the past several seasons. One of the finest things in years is 'Ah, Wilderness,' with George M. Cohan in as excellent a piece of personal work as I have ever seen."

Speaking of the little theatre, he remarked that it had helped the drama as a whole by keeping plays before people in times when the professional stage had difficulty in maintaining itself without thought of new productions, and sometimes scarcely even the classics.

"You can't tell how a new play will be taken outside of New York regardless of the hit it was there. For instance, 'Sailor Beware' seemed headed for high favor in Chicago because of its type, and yet it hardly got anywhere with Chicago audiences. They simply didn't seem to understand it. 'The Double Door,' a big hit in the east, went to Los Angeles, which can be a choosey town sometimes, and it is going very well. I repeat, it all depends on your local audiences."

He commented on the peace and seclusion of Carmel forests and said that in New York state it was his greatest pleasure to bury himself among mountain trees, to the protests of his urban friends, and that Carmel appealed to him strongly as a home place through its combination of sea and tree-clad hills.

The late Margaret Fortier, while a regular visitor to Carmel since 1910, was known mainly by the older residents because of her desire for seclusion, and for long walks alone in the beauty of scenery that had first been Carmel's attraction for her. Frequently she went to Palo Colorado canyon for her vacations, and there roamed the countryside.

A sister of Adele Bechdolt and the late Mrs. W. L. Overstreet, she came here first to visit these relatives, then later she and her mother came regularly to their cottage on Junipero Street, where as a lover of animals she collected many cats about her.

Mrs. Ivy Van Cott

An outstanding student in the University of California, she was a classmate of James Hopper and Robert Welles Ritchie, and in her career as a teacher this scholastic reputation brought many difficult assignments, not the least of which was her last one in the San Leandro Junior High School.

Condolence is being sent the Pine Cone over the loss of Ivy Van Cott from its staff, and the members want to thank all their friends for this expression of kindness.

But Ivy has gone to her reward, and nobody should feel badly about it. Ivy has gone to Hotel Del Monte where I. Magnin will hereafter be boss, and Ivy's last words were that she hoped the good old Pine Cone could get along without her peaceful presence when the boys and the dogs and the politicians ran rampant through the editorial offices. Ivy used to stop many a fracas by just a few soothing words.

Carmelites who happen to have a spare moment are asked to drop in at the Hotel and give Ivy a cheer and tell her the latest doings on Ocean Avenue. After all, Carmel is still Carmel and Ivy used to know more about it than ever appeared in the columns of the Monarch of the Weeklies.

At last the law has actually invaded the waterfront cottage that this sensation-loving nation believes was occupied by Aimee Semple McPherson during a rumored vacation here some years back. City Attorney Argyll Campbell and family will occupy it for the year.

Campbell let it be known that he would take all steps to protect himself from meddlesome sightseers and would even go to the limits of charging admission if need be to keep the crowds in control. This would imply that police protection by Marshal Gus Englund would be had, and as Englund was among the Carmel witnesses taken to Los Angeles when the alleged vacation was investigated he will be able to give intelilgent care to the situation. Many others might be enlisted by the city attorney to aid in the matter, among them Daisy Bostick, the writer, who could give true Carmel background to curious inquirers and keep Aimee in her place.

Mrs. Guy Koepp, wife of the architect, has again become active in dancing. She is teaching natural and interprative at the Forest Hill School by the methods which she originated during her colorful career as a concert artist. Before her marriage Mrs. Koepp (Zarah Lee) was acclaimed as one of the loveliest of ceative and natural dancers.

Coming from a family of creative persons, Mrs. Koepp took a dancing course at Columbia, studied pantomime with Cozette Kellar, ballet with Madame Elizabetta Menzelli and esthetics with Louis Chalif. She has danced before enthusiastic audiences all over this country. Carmel people who have seen her dance say that she was as petite and lovely as a doh and yet possessed creative greatness. Her mother Marie Lee is an actress and poet, her father C. W. Lee is a famous organizer, has raised thousands for the red cross and established ethics in advertising, her three brothers are active writers in Hollywood.

FIRE DEPARTMENT HAS ITS ANNUAL BANQUET

The annual banquet of the Carmel Volunteer Fire Department came on Washington's Birthday and had the added festivity of this holiday to make its get-together brighter. In charge of Fred Myler and Birney Adams, the dinner was prepared for thirty members and guests, among the latter being Judge George Wood, Mayor John Catlin, Fire Commissioner John Jordan and others. Mayor Catlin told of plans for the new city hall and fire house, as well as giving a general resume of pertinent local conditions.

In connection with the department, it is of interest to learn that classes in maintenance of quarters, apparatus and equipment are nearing the end of their sixteen session run in Monterey, conducted by Captain Baker of the University of California department of vocational training. This is of direct benefit to the taxpayers in that the fire fighting apparatus is made to give better service and to last much longer under intelligent care.

MAN DROWNS IN SURF NEAR THE HIGHLANDS

Washed off rocks by surf at the mouth of Garapotos Creek last Saturday, Charles V. Price, of Salinas, was drowned fishing in company with his brother. The latter made desperate efforts to effect rescue after he himself had been flung into the water by a huge wave, but was unable to succeed owing to undertow and rough water.

Marshal Gus Englund, of Carmel was summoned to assist in recovery of the body, but early search proved unavailing and lookout is being kept all along the neighboring coastline.

ABALONE BALL PRACTICE AT FIELD THIS SUNDAY

The Abalone League season is getting under way slowly, partly due to the lack of Charles Van Riper's driving force behind it and to diversified interests of the old timers. Van Riper, for years the Atlas of the League, writes from New York that business will keep him there indefinitely, but he implores the local stalwarts such as Frank Sheridan, Don Staniford and Tal Josselyn to keep the League going in its accustomed combative style.

There is a whispering around town that some of the ex-starts have felt twinges of age in game-battered joints, and that wives are urging quieter Sundays at home than in the days when papa could romp through an afternoon and still sit up to play an evening of bridge. But on the other hand a new crop of players have come along, and there are still some snorting old warhorses left to gallop among 'em, and it looks as if a series will be in the making within a few weeks.

All interested should apply to Doc Staniford at his drug store to learn of the Sunday practice.

FIGURES TRANSPOSED IN CLERK'S REPORT

Owing to a typographical error in the edition of February 23rd, on page 6, under Financial Report of the City Clerk, the Printing total was misplaced and put under Bonds. The Printing total, which follows Legal Blanks, is $50.72, and except for the transposition the resultant totals are unchanged.
